

What Kind of Influence are You?

Regardless of your job title or the role you play at work, you influence the other individuals around you. We all have influence on each other. When it comes to work and workplace safety, your actions, words, and attitude can go a long way in either helping or hurting the safety culture.

The Influence of Coworkers

Think about how much time we spend every week with our coworkers; for some individuals it exceeds the time spent with family. We have all experienced the power a single coworker can have over an entire group. The same can be said about the effect supervisors can have over the workers they lead. We all have either a positive or negative effect on those individuals around us in every facet of what we deal with on a day to day basis.

Influence over Workplace Safety

A major focus point in the workplace at many companies is safety. A coworker can have a positive effect on us on how we feel in general, but the same person can have a negative effect on safety in your workplace. Our attitudes, words, and actions towards workplace safety communicate a message to others and will affect them regarding their outlook on safety. This influence can eventually affect not only others' attitudes, but also the actions those individuals around us choose to take. When negative influences compound, it creates a weak safety culture. This not only impedes others from being able to work safely, but also can lead to injuries occurring on the job.

Be a Positive Influence

We do not always have the power to make the rules or influence policies put into place, however we have the power to choose how we react to any changes. If you choose to have a positive attitude towards new changes even if you do not agree with them, those around you will be more likely to follow suit. When negative attitudes, words, actions, etc. are allowed to make their way into the workplace, it can be a slippery slope. Once the general view of safety is negative it is very hard to get everyone to want to work safe so that everyone goes home to their families at the end of the shift.

ONE COMPANY – THREE CORE TRADES

FRAMING CARPENTRY | TRIM CARPENTRY | ROOFING